

Abstract

5

A surgical ultrasonic instrument has a housing with an ultrasonic transducer, with a shaft being connected to the housing with an application arrangement being provided at its distal end. The application arrangement includes a working element driven in an oscillating manner by the ultrasonic transducer and a fixed position working element between which a working space is formed for the reception of tissue.

10